GOVERNOR WAITE'S INAUGURAL.

The new Governor of Colorado has covered a great deal of ground in his inaugural message. In addition to his recommendations to the legislature on State affairs, he seems to have felt called upon to advise the Congress of the United States on a number of questions that are not usually supposed to come within the gubernatorial jurisdiction. He wants the arid lands ceded to the States and Territories in which they lie; he wants free coinage; he wants the United States constitution amended so as to provide for a direct election of Senators by the people; he wants no bonds issued for the Nicaragua canal, he wants all salaries of United States officers paid in silver dollars; he wants the government to make a new issue of greenbacks.

Governor Waite is probably aware that the United States Congress is not likely to pay much heed to his recommendations; but this part of his message was presumably necessary to satisfy the Populist demand for a "reform" of things in general.

In his treatment of State affairs, the Governor makes some good suggestions.

He is right about the impolicy of leasing State convicts. He is right about the impolicy of keeping the public lands of the State. He does well in recommending an additional appropriation for the Colorado exhibit at the World's Fair.

Other recommendations are not so good. His advice that a railway commission be appointed, with power to determine rates of transportation, and to settle complaints without recourse to the courts, is thoroughly vicious in principle. It would amount in practice simply to a "holding up" of all our railways in the State, and would inflict irreparable injury upon all the interests of the State. His recommendation that all labor troubles be settled by compulsory arbitration is one not to be hastily adopted. A law might easily be passed upon this subject which would interfere unwarrantably with the right of private contract.

Governor Waite evidently has well defined views on many public questions, and he has no hesitancy in expressing them. He is resolved not to be a mere figure-head, and in its relations with him the legislature must recognize the fact that it has to deal with a strong and vigorous and self-assertive personality.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN BUTLER.

It is probably with a feeling of surprise that most of us, on reading of the death of Gen. Butler, found that he was only in his 75th year. He has been before the public so long and in such varied capacities that the memory of the present generation of man can scarcely recall the time when General Butler was not a prominent figure.

Although he has lived more than a quarter of a century since the war, and had been identified with many interests and many causes, General Butler will be remembered in history mainly in connection with the great civil conflict, and especially with the march through Baltimore, the declaration that negroes were "contraband of war," and the occupation of New Orleans.

As a general, Butler never attained the first rank, but he had very high executive qualities, and was a benevolent sort of despot when he had the opportunity. His soldiers were fond and proud of him, and he did well the work he was set to do. In politics, Butler was a free lance. Always a Democrat, he was yet independent. In 1884, he came very near beating Grover Cleveland; and some of his adherents believe yet that thousands of votes cast for him in New York State were counted for the regular candidate.

As a lawyer, General Butler's learning, acumen, originality and aggressive nous made him one of the leaders of the bar. Up to the time of his death he had an extensive practice, especially before the Supreme Court of the United States. The General was fond of sport and of all manly exercises. He owned the old yacht America, that won the famous cup, and he took delight in sailing her every year on the annual cruise to New Bedford and Vineyard Haven.

With all its eccentricities and mistakes, General Butler's long life and he lived more in his 74 years than most men would in a hundred and fifty—was on the whole a useful one; and so long as the war of the Rebellion is remembered, his name will live in history.

THE NEW QUARANTINE BILL.

The quarantine bill just passed by the Senate is of interest to every citizen of the United States, and not merely to those living on the Atlantic seaboard. This year the United States will see such a mingling of population from the Atlantic to the Pacific, as has never before taken place. The World's Fair will be the meeting place of people from all our States and from foreign countries. It is therefore essential to Colorado as well as to New York, to Kansas as well as to Massachusetts or Pennsylvania, that the quarantine service should be as perfect as possible, and more especially so in view of the strong probability, amounting almost to certainty, that the cholera will be epidemic in Hamburg and other European ports next summer.

The measure that has passed the Senate enlarges the jurisdiction over quarantine stations of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Surgeon General of the Marine hospital, and it confers upon the President the power to suspend by proclamation the introduction of persons and property into the United States. It does not hand over the whole quarantine system to the highest authority, however, and h[illegible] it [illegible] by defective; for th[illegible] will inevitably [illegible] State and the federal authorities, so [illegible] in the [illegible] The bill ought to be amended in [illegible] to provide for [illegible] Our experience of the past [illegible] House of Representatives, however, is not encouraging to any expectation of good legislation of any kind. The present bill, which is substantially that of Senator Harris of Tennessee, would probably make some improvement in the situation, but it is a half way measure that cannot be of any great permanent value.

EXTRAORDINARY WEATHER.

The weather report at the Pike's Peak station for December shows a mean temperature for the month of 1[illegible] above zero. This, with one exception, [illegible] is the lowest average recorded temperature for the month of December. A more remarkable feature of the month was the precipitation, which was greatly in excess of all previous records, as follows:

Year	Inches
1[illegible]	[illegible]
1[illegible]	[illegible]
1[illegible]	[illegible]
1[illegible]	[illegible]
1[illegible]	[illegible]
1[illegible]	[illegible]
1[illegible]	[illegible]
1[illegible]	[illegible]
1[illegible]	[illegible]
1[illegible]	[illegible]
1[illegible]	[illegible]
1[illegible]	[illegible]
1[illegible]	[illegible]
1[illegible]	[illegible]
1[illegible]	[illegible]
1[illegible]	[illegible]
Total	[illegible]

The precipitation for last month was very nearly equal to that of fourteen previous Decembers, and on one day the precipitation (1.77 inches on the 6th) was greater than that recorded for any previous December month.

These figures show a change which is certainly remarkable. One of the reasons alleged for discontinuing the service on the Peak in 1887 was that the records of fourteen years would furnish all needed data, and that no further information of importance could be obtained. Under the new arrangement the observations are more complex and along somewhat different lines, and now the records have already proved that there is something new to be learned from the most simple observations.

[illegible] the figures for December, 1892, are exceptional. It seems hardly possible to account for so great a change entirely by the vagaries of the weather, and if the records of precipitation should continue to show anything like such an increase as this it would form better evidence of climatic change than any we now possess. But certainly no such argument could be drawn from the figures of a single month or a single year. The prevailing direction of the wind for the month on the Peak was west, and according to the new theory familiar to most of our readers, this is sufficient to account in part for the excessive precipitation on the Peak, as well as for the warm and dry weather which prevailed for a large part of the month at Colorado Springs. The prevalence of the west wind would also seem to testify against the effect of cultivation, settlement and other local conditions in the region east of the great mountain.

However, an ounce of fact is worth more than a pound of theory, and the facts are that the precipitation on the Peak for December was extraordinarily large, and that thanks to the Weather bureau, we shall be fully informed in due course of time whether the change is a temporary or a permanent one.

GOOD RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. W. S. Boynton, the new member of the board of county commissioners, on Tuesday introduced a resolution, which was adopted by the board, providing that the minutes of the sessions of the county commissioners are open for inspection of the people at all times; and that the public journals are invited to publish the minutes of this board; and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to each of the city papers.

These resolutions are in every way commendable and reflect credit upon the board and Commissioner Boynton. An illustration of the danger arising from "star chamber" methods is to be found in the corruption being unearthed in Arapahoe county, which would not have been possible had the people been informed of what was going on. Even where county affairs are kept free from wrong-doing, danger constantly exists and what is more there is always an opportunity for unscrupulous demagogues to make allegations of fraud, which have a strong influence with certain classes.

El Paso's affairs have been honestly and economically administered, but all the more for that reason the records should be open to all.

When to Wind a Watch.

A gentleman who had purchased a handsome new watch complained to the jeweler who sold it to him that it did not keep accurate time. It varied at least a minute to a week, when it should have kept time to a second. "Let me see your watch," said the jeweler. He critically examined the works through his glass, closed the case, and handed the time piece to its owner.

"There is nothing the matter with your watch. It will keep perfect time if you wind it in the morning."

"Why, I wind it at a certain hour each night," said the gentleman.

"That has nothing to do with it," responded the clerk. "During the night your watch is not, as it were. That is, it hangs in your vest without motion or touch. If you don't wind it at night the mainspring is then relaxed instead of being in that condition during the day. By winding it in the morning the mainspring remains close and tight all day. It keeps the movement steady at a time when you are handling it, running around and more or less jarring it as you hasten about the city attending to your daily affairs. A relaxed mainspring at this time accounts for the fine watches varying so slightly. Try it, and you will find that I am right."—Albany Argus.

An Inconceivable Thing.

The prospects for the passage of the Nicaragua canal bill seem to be brighter than they were. It is conceivable, as it may appear, that there are some members of congress from the United States who are opposed to the government affording aid to the great enterprise. It is the one great development enterprise projected from which the Gulf states would reap the lion's share of the benefit that would reach to the whole country. It would inevitably and necessarily turn a great part of the world's commerce through the Mediterranean of the New World and place of the Gulf ports great depots of trade. It would literally build the Gulf states into prosperity. Above all, it would build prosperity in Alabama, whose products are peculiarly those for which the canal would create a demand.

But, sooth to tell, more than one of self interest should urge this government to push forward the work. The sleepless British lion is creeping on the Gulf of Mexico and already has his fortress on Central American soil. He is ready for a spring on the great isle of Cuba. When once he has the Gulf bottled, the United States will build a canal at the cannon's mouth, or, and at all events, southern coast lines may be forever run around Cape Horn.

We repeat that it is inconceivable upon how any Gulf state congressman, and above all, any American citizen born, can with his ardent support from the most remote distance oppose for crossing the isthmus, or, as a matter of fact, the central of the country.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

The Trans-Siberian Line.

From the San Francisco Call.

A Russian government agent, Mr. Michin, is now in this city. He has been examining American railway motive power and equipment. He finds them far superior to anything in Russia or elsewhere in Europe. Undoubtedly they are peculiarly applicable to Russian and Siberian conditions, because they are similar to those of the United States in many respects. Mr. Michin thinks that the transsiberian road will be completed within eight years. Russia has recently declined the assistance of western Europe, and proposes to build the road herself. She may find it to her interest to get American equipment, in part, at least. The English technical journal, Engineering, recently published an article intended to demonstrate that the Siberian road will be a commercial failure. Its points do not seem to be all well taken. It is probably correct in arguing that the proposed line can not compete with the ocean route for the carriage of goods from China to England and western Europe. Even at a uniform rate of 1 cent a mile per ton the cost would be many times that of sea transportation.

In figuring on the probable volume of local traffic Engineering is less convincing. It has not had before its eyes the result of railroad building in the west and especially in the northwestern states of the Union. Much of the country tributary to the trans-Siberian road is as rich in mineral as [illegible] and as favored in climate as our northwest. The railroads have built up a business for themselves there; why not in Siberia? Engineering estimates probable local tonnage on a population of less than one to the square mile, making no allowance for development of mineral and agricultural resources and consequent gain in population and trade. California has a prospective interest in the completion of this road. It will build up communities that will become our customers. It will not be the work of a day or a year, but commerce does not reckon at short range. Military considerations will build the road; its building will bring about the traffic to maintain it.

THE NEW YEAR'S GAZETTE.

The Colorado Springs GAZETTE gave Cripple Creek a New Year present in the shape of a full-page illustration of that camp. THE GAZETTE'S New Year edition was simply immense.—[Antonito Ledger.

Among the imposing New Year editions received we may mention the Denver News and the Colorado Springs GAZETTE. THE GAZETTE is a splendid recommend for the "Springs" and surrounding country whose enterprise it reflects, and the edition adds another feather to its cap, consisting of twelve pages of neatly illustrated matter and a well executed map of the Cripple Creek mining district. The monster issue of The News was unapproached and unapproachable.—Craig Pantagraph.

The Colorado Springs GAZETTE presents its readers with a two-page map of Cripple Creek mining district along with a large New Year's edition.—[Alma Bulletin.

The New Year's editions of the Denver dailies, Aspen Times and Colorado Springs GAZETTE were marvels of western journalism. If every other business in this state had the "grit and grit" behind them that the newspapers have Colorado would be a greater power than New York. Fact.—Delta Independent.

STATE NEWS.

The Saguache Herald says there are 3,000 artesian wells in the San Luis valley.

A Bessemer dispatch says that for the first time in several years every department of the steel works is active and in full operation. The Rio Grande brought in Friday 100 carloads of scrap iron and ore for use at the works, and more is expected.

The round-up of jackrabbits which has been going on in Prowers county for a week was concluded Friday night. Over 1100 jackrabbits have been killed, and farmers estimate the value in riddance of this pest at $3000. Jackrabbits are very disastrous to wheat and orchards, and as the little animals are thick in Prowers county, they have done much damage. On the last day of the hunt Captain P. S. Sorah made the best record, killing 103 rabbits. Another hunt is being organized.

It is reported from Florence that activity in the development of the oil industry keeps up a lively gait. There never was a time when so much work was going on all over the fields. The companies which seem to be attracting the most attention are the Rocky Mountain Oil company and the Florence Oil and Refining company. The former is said to be away behind with its orders for illuminating oil, and not being able to supply the demand, takes several cars of oil each day from the Florence company. The Florence Oil company is again pushing work upon its new refining plant, which is being erected at a cost of $250,000, but cannot be ready to run before next summer sometime. It will have a capacity of 1200 barrels daily.

OAKHURST!

THE COUNTRY SEAT of the late G. C. Hamilton, Esq., and latterly run as a boys' ranch by the undersigned, is offered for sale at a bargain.

It is beautifully situated, about ten miles north, at the edge of the woods. The prospect from the house is grand in the extreme. The land is right in the way of the big ditch running from Monument, which will double its value.

Pasturage alone pays. Have over 100 head of horses now.

House of eight rooms and bath room, all papered throughout with finest paper and finished in natural woods. Three tiled open fireplaces with mantel mirrors.

Reservoir supplying house throughout with running water, and providing ice in winter. Stable with room for 27 horses, 10 box stalls. Stable, barn, chicken and pig houses and corrals, all painted.

By the Author of "Jerry."
Miss S. B. Elliott, the author of "Jerry," will write a realistic story of life among the Tennessee mountaineers, "THE DUKEST SPERRET."

Personal Reminiscences.
SOME UNPUBLISHED LETTERS OF CARLYLE TO EDWARD IRVING and others, dealing with a part of Carlyle's life, far different from that brought out in the recent literature of Carlyle. Reminiscences. RECOLLECTIONS OF LINCOLN AND SUMNER. By the late Marquis De Chambrun. Both articles are full of new matter. AN ARTIST IN JAPAN. By Robert Blum, who has just returned from a residence of nearly two years in that country. Abundantly illustrated by the author. HISTORIC MOMENTS, which have been a feature of the magazine during 1892, will be continued by some particularly striking papers, among them several by the great war correspondent, William H. Russel. Archibald Forbes and others.

Men's Occupations.
A series of articles on the life work of men in many callings, the chief work, exclusive of professions, in which men earn their livelihood.

The World's Fair in Chicago.
A series will be published later in the year giving the impressions made by the exhibition upon different observers of note, both American and foreign, and many of these observers will be also artists who will illustrate their own articles.

Miscellaneous Articles.
Further contributions to the POOR IN GREAT CITIES, Mrs. Lowell's illustrated paper on the London Poor, for HOME AID TO INVALID CHILDREN, etc. Of special interest also will be Professor Hodgkins' authoritative account of the PEARY RELIEF EXPEDITION, illustrated; a very interesting article on Octave Uzanne on the art objects of WOOD AND SART now going on in Paris and articles upon artistic subjects, women and travel, etc.

The Illustrations
Of the year will represent the work not only of the well known illustrators, but many drawings will also appear by artists who are best known as painters.

The Press has the best possible organization to secure news from the most important sources, and with nearly 800 correspondents in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware, the State and near-by home news is covered with a routine, carefulness and attention in detail not even attempted by any other paper.
The Press has also the best of correspondents in all the great cities of the United States, as well as financial and railroad experts in Chicago and the West, who keep the paper more than abreast with events.
The columns of the Sunday Press are enriched by contributions from those whose names are written high in our times of great authors, novelists, essayists as well as from men of high rank in public life. The best authors know that their best audiences are the readers of the Daily, Sunday, and Weekly Press.
In politics the Press knows no other master than the people and the past year has seen, as has been seen before, the marked fact that it is otherwise to no political boss. It has no political ambitions to foster, but looks after the interests of its readers, and delivers itself upon the issues of the day in a manner both frank and fearless, letting the facts speak for themselves, and evading no issues, but meeting them all on the basis of fair play to all men at all times. Its pages know no distinctions and the rights of one class over another are neither recognized nor respected.

HOW TO SEE CHICAGO AND LIVE

An Expert Hygienist's Advice to Those Expecting to Visit the World's Fair

In the current number of The Engineering Magazine appears an article by J C Bayles, Ph D, formerly president of the health department of New York on the probable influence of the Chicago Columbian Exposition on the death rate of 1893 It is a somewhat startling contribution to the literature of this important subject but is not at all sensational Its purpose is to point out the many and serious dangers to which thoughtless people subject themselves under such conditions as will exist in Chicago, through imprudence, overexertion and indifference to the most elementary rules of personal hygiene

After a brief examination of the conditions existing in Chicago, Dr Bayles assumes that the multitudes attracted by the exposition can visit the city as safely as any other The sights to be seen by visitors will be due, not to any negligence on the part of the municipal authorities or the management of the Fair, but to reckless impudence on the part of visitors themselves The writer follows a typical family group through three days and nights of average experience in Chicago during the Fair season, and back to their homes to pay the penalties which nature exacts for the infraction of her inflexible laws. This portion of Dr. Bayles' article will vividly recall to many readers that unfortunate experience in Philadelphia in 1876.

Dr Bayles discusses the question of danger in the fact that so large a proportion of those who visit the Exposition will be physically unfit to go there He advises those who cannot afford the expense of comfortable accommodations to remain at home and that those who are too old, too young, or too feeble from any cause, to be perfectly safe the fatigues and exposures of seeing the fair, be left at home The writer concludes his advice with the following code of simple rules which every visitor to the Exposition may follow with advantage

I. Before going to Chicago to visit the Exposition determine whether you are physically able to go, and can afford it. In deciding these points one may safely assume that a great deal more strength will be needed than is required for the normal hard work of life and that to go and return will cost a good deal more than one would expect to find out beforehand.

II Take with you no one for whom you are responsible, without the approval of your physician It is folly to insist that from one third to one half the people who will go to Chicago from distances less than fifty miles would be advised by any competent and conscientious physician not to go, if such advice were asked

III. When you reach Chicago, make it your first business to secure wholesome and comfortable lodgings. Under such circumstances the money you may spend a good deal more than a place to sleep. It is impossible for any one to keep up for two or three days the tension of eager sight seeing without doing something more than a bed in a closet to retreat to when he can go nowhere else In finding lodgings, the visitor who has made no arrangements in advance would do well to avail himself of established and recognized agencies of information and to reject all interested advice or personal solicitation

IV Avoid excessive fatigue The sense of being tired is nature's warning that the physical powers are being taxed. The most fatiguing thing on earth is a great exposition A rapid succession of vivid and exciting impressions stupefies the brain and employs the more muscular fatigue of walking and standing for consecutive hours When the interest flags and physical fatigue asserts itself go where you can rest.

V Eat regularly, lightly and frequently keeping strictly to plain and wholesome food The advice of a physician on this point obtained before starting, will be of great value to you The fact that the doctor and so invests the simplest and most familiar hygienic rule with an ex cathedra authority

VI Drink moderately and carefully, avoiding unknown or unaccustomed beverages. Generally speaking, aerated waters in siphons are the safest and most refreshing drinks available to transient visitors in cities.

Mrs M M AYLESWORTH Denver 1413 Tremont Street

For over a year said Mrs Aylesworth I suffered continually from catarrh of the head throat and stomach My head at the throat were always filled with a thick yellowish mucus—this gave me most trouble at night—was so bad at times I would feel as if I were choking to death and I would have to get up to catch my breath I had severe headaches all the time My stomach was totally disorganized and worse yet. No food agreed with me and nothing I ate gave me any strength Food would lie on my stomach as if packed into a rock and cause terrible distress and discomfort

The trouble extended to my kidneys I was weak and worn out Mr. Aylesworth—Dear Sir—Your treatment entirely cured me when I took the Copeland Medical Institute treatment I improved steadily under the treatment and the start and in two months I was cured What I wish to make most emphatic though is not alone the fact that the physicians of the Copeland Institute cured my trouble but that TRUE TO IT WAS A PERMANENT CURE It was last Fall—close to a year ago now—that I left their care I passed through last winter always in the best of health not a symptom of my old trouble has returned to annoy me I am as well and hearty to-day as ever in my life

The Century Magazine in 1893.

It will be hard for a person who cares for good reading to make a better investment than a year's subscription to The Century Magazine We might stop here. Note to expire too great if it will only produce what the Century offers next This is the policy that has made it, as the Pall Mall Gazette of London says By far the best of the magazines English or American.

The November number begins a new volume and contains the first chapters of a powerful novel of New York society called Sweet Bells Out of Tune written by Mrs Burton Harrison the author of The Anglomaniacs In this story, the fashionable wedding the accessories of the homes in the Metropolitan Opera House the smart set in the country houses are faithfully reflected and the illustrations by Charles Dana Gibson Life's well-known caricaturist are as brilliant as the novel

In this November number begins also a great series of papers on The Bible and Science, along with Dr at the Bible contain Scientific Errors by Professor Shields of Princeton who takes headed around that the Bible does not contain scientific errors if any moderate and who meet interesting states the case from his point of view Other articles in this will include one in the Thanksgiving (Christmas) number The Effect of Scientific Study upon Religious Beliefs

An important series of letters that passed between General Sherman and his brother Senator John Sherman is also printed in November which number contains also contributions from the most distinguished writers including an article by James Russell Lowell which was not quite completed at the time of his death The succession which Richard Price makes in the November Century as to what could be done with the World's Fair if it was kept for one Sunday is one which seems the most practical solution of the problem yet offered

The December Century is to be a great Christmas number full of Christmas stories and in it will begin the first chapters of a striking novel of life in Colorado "The Bar Sinister" by Wolcott Balestier who wrote The Naulahka with Rudyard Kipling

A Land's Opinion

The Illustrated London News issue of Jan [illegible] contains the following notice of the Colorado Springs book from the pen of the editor Mr Howard Paul

"Colorado Springs and Its Famous Scenic Environs, by Geo. Rex Buchanan.

[illegible] is a delightful and vivid presentation of the many points of interest and picturesqueness of this wonderful part of western America that by the people here is popularly termed the Island of Sunshine The illustrations of an admirably written book are from photographs taken specially for it, and the photogravure are by the New York Photogravure Company Nothing finer of the kind has ever appeared in the United States, and I doubt if any publication on Europe can show such a list of such series of exquisitely executed pictures as Mr Buchanan's handsome volume contains The architectural details of the various hotels are fully represented as for instance the world famed Childs Dressel Home [illegible] Pioneers stand out with sharp and [illegible] features while the views of the main ranges can not be excelled as [illegible] are reproduced with wonderful [illegible] It would repay tenfold any tourist to make the journey to Colorado Springs for the sake of the superb views of Pikes Peak and the rocky grandeurs of [illegible] Gods Garden [illegible] interesting and beautifully illustrated Mr Buchanan is the secretary of the board of commerce of Colorado Springs and also of the Pikes Peak Park Association"

WILLS OF RICH MEN

How Several Wealthy Men Have Disposed of Their Property

The small bequests by Jay Gould to his brother and sister call attention once more to the fact that the financial results of the creation of a fortune in a family are apt to be small to the collateral branches and heavy to the direct line of issue

The wills of the heads of the Astor family do not point a moral in this respect because the family has followed a rule designed for the perpetuation of a great family estate in two parcels. Side bequests if considerable would have prevented the execution of this plan The distribution of the late Samuel J Tilden's fortune is not illustrative of the common custom because he was a bachelor

A. T Stewart the great merchant prince, made a simple will In the second paragraph of the document opened after his death in 1876 he wrote simply "All my property and estate of every kind and description and wherever situated I give devise and bequeath to my dear wife Cornelia M Stewart her heirs and assigns forever" In the next paragraph he appointed Henry Hilton to be sole executor and wind up his partnership business and affairs. He made ex Judge Hilton the widow and William Libbey his executors and he bequeathed to Mr Hilton the sum of $1 000 000 as a mark of regard"

In a codicil to the will he bequeathed various sums of from $50 000 to $500 to as many faithful employees in his business and other sums of $2 500 to $500 to seven household servants To two sisters named Marron at whose father's house and hands he had enjoyed hospitality he gave $12 000 a year and a house in this city To Henry Hilton's wife he gave $5 000 In a second codicil he gave $10 000 each to four persons of the name of Clinch who were relatives of his wife to two of whom he gave a house in town and to Sarah Smith and her daughter he gave $10 000 each He willed that all persons who had remained in his employ during twenty years should have $1 000 and all who had worked for him ten years $500 A letter to his wife accompanied the will and in it he said that he hoped to live to carry out his charitable schemes but if he died before doing so he would leave it to her to do so with the advice and assistance of their friend Henry Hilton

Mr Stewart had no children If he had no relatives either his will is not a case in point But on the other hand if it is true as claimants assert that he has a number of cousins and their kin in Ireland he is absolute forgetful of them or refused to benefit them so markedly apparent

Cornelius Vanderbilt who died in January 1877 made many bequests to others than his children To his wife he gave $[illegible] on her all the contents of his house in Washington place the use of which was hers for life To his brother Jacob H Vanderbilt he gave $50 000 To his sister Phebe he gave $1 200 a year during her life To his nieces and nephews he gave various annuities ranging from $20 000 and $10 000 down to $300 and $500 a year But he gave one grand nephew $[illegible] another $20 000 His doctor got $10 000 and a faithful old clerk got $20 000 To an uncle he gave $5 000 and to the wife of a nephew he gave $[illegible]

When Commodore Vanderbilt's will the situation was altered To William H he left seventy five hundred [illegible] the bulk of his magnificent property the value of which he was estimated in [illegible] 000 000 The whole property had been considered as worth $100 000 000 and of the $[illegible] that William H had got one half went to William as the oldest [illegible] getting great wealth largest share He seemed fine to [illegible] a fellow that young Cornelius [illegible] had already shown ability as a financier would have [illegible] the head of the house in the third generation

To his son Cornelius worthy son Cornelius he gave merely the interest on $900 000

He divided $1,600 000 equally among five daughters, and two of them he further enriched the one with the interest on $400 000 and the other with the interest on $800,000 Enough I believe for it was said at that time to enable each of the daughters to live in comfort and by the efforts of a competent husband

When it came time to execute the will of William H Vanderbilt it was found that he had given to his son William K $[illegible] 000, to his [illegible] Jacob H $[illegible] and to [illegible] 1 000 shares of New York Central to his aunt Phebe and to each of twelve other relatives annuities of $1 200 The great bulk of the increased estate went to the children There were eight of them and each got $5 000 000 outright together with the interest during life on another $5 000 000 the eighth part of a trust fund of $40 000 000 The principal in this legacy was to go to his grandchildren when his children died To his sister Caroline he gave an additional $5 000 000 outright and to his favorite grandson William H the son of Cornelius he gave $1 000 000 outright The remainder of his estate was to have the furniture and works of art which he had in his residence To his wife he left the income from $[illegible] and the right to give away $500 000 to whomsoever she pleased To each of his daughters he gave the house in which she was living when he died He thus disposed of only about half of this great property which was said to be sufficient to give four dollars to every man woman and child in the country Mr Vanderbilt gave the rest to his first and second sons Cornelius and William K or about $50,000 000 each —New York Sun
